My book has been on the New York Times bestsellers list for only two days and I've already spent a rather large amount of money buying the books of my fellow bloggers. If that isn't proof that the vast majority of society shares a collective need for forgiveness on Sept. 11, how much further does one need to go? In my book (already finished, and in fact done so years ago, but still in manuscript form) I've included a scene in which I discuss the events of 9/11 with my old friend, Opie Cunningham. Opie's beloved brother, Bub, was killed on one of the hijacked planes and I was desperate to know for certain if Opie was okay. When I finally get a hold of Opie he is despondent and worried that he has been indirectly responsible for the death of his brother. Because I'm an insensitive and 6d1f23a050
